

NICK ANTONETTI

Team: John Renny Predators
League: RSEQ D2 U18
Position: Goalie
Born: 2007
Height: 5.09ft or 175cm
Weight: 130 lbs

Report Card – Excellent: 4.6-5, Good: 4.5-4, Average:3-3.9, Below Average: 2, Poor: 1

| | |
|------------------------|----------------------------|
| Size/Strength | Average: 3.8 |
| Skating | Good: 4.2 |
| Angles | Good: 4.4 |
| Puckhandling | Good: 2 |
| Reflex | Average: 4.3 |
| Positioning | Good-Excellent: 4.7 |
| Glove | Good: 4.4 |
| Competitiveness | Good: 4.4 |

Strengths

- 1. Always being squared to the puck
- 2. Always has the desire to make the 2nd save and doesn't give up on the play
- 3. A very strong low glove

Area's For Improvement

- 1. Size: Build a bit more muscle for durability
- 2. He needs to start playing with the puck a lot more
- 3. Needs to try to telegraph quicker the play

Skill:

Solid lightweight goaltender who is always square to the puck to make a save and does not try to show flash. His positioning is probably his best aspect and his determination allows him to have that motive to have the same goal of always trying to make a save.

Scouting Report:

Overall, Nick is very solid lightweight goaltender who definitely gives his team a chance to win who should be given more starts compared to the starting goaltender. He has very strong positioning skills where he seems to always stay square with the puck similarly to Karel Vejmelka to the Arizona Coyotes or Ilya Samsonov of the Leafs. He has very strong determination which is one of the main reasons why he always gives his team the chance to win vs his opponents. His weakest aspect is definitely his puck handling skills considering he wants nothing to do with going out of his net which if he wants to improve, he has to start taking some risks. His overall development with his glove positioning is a positive considering over the seasons he has been quicker with his reflexes. Another small note that he needs to improve on is his situational analysis and try to become more-so of a telegraphic goaltender.

NHL Potential:

If his quickness and telegraphing skills approve by playing in higher-end competition, he can become a solid back-up goalie

Style compares to: Karel Vejmelka